

MORNING APPEAL

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 28

PARNELL ON TOP

The end of the Times-Parnell suit is a complete vindication of Parnell. The letters have been proven forgeries, and the miserable tool of the Government has confessed his crime and fled.

An immense amount of money has been spent by the Times and the government to cast the odium of the letters on Parnell and the cause of Home Rule in Ireland, and this money has only gone to strengthen Parnell's fight, and cast confusion on his adversaries.

It is one of the greatest political sensations in history, and all Ireland is dancing with joy at the result.

Naturally, those who were neutral in the fight will look upon Parnell as the target of a diabolical conspiracy, which, in the interests of justice, failed, and his following will be materially strengthened.

No one, says the San Francisco Chronicle, will seriously object to the placing of Rosecrans on the retired list of the army. He served with great gallantry during the war, and the country can afford to honor him for his services. But the old man will probably feel ashamed of himself more than once when enjoying his well-earned ease, when he recalls his opposition to the bill to place Grant on the retired list. In the course of debate he distinctly stated that he was opposed on principle to permitting men to sever their connection with the army and then be restored to rank. It was not a matter of principle with him at all, but a bit of spitefulness against Grant, which promoted his opposition. It would not be an ungrateful thing for Rosecrans to make some retraction for this act of his, but nobody expects that he will do so.

What service was performed by Bert Wilkins, in the capture of the two Indians, for which he was not paid? This is a remark frequently made since the passage of the bill giving him $500. We are informed that an examination of the Court records discloses the fact that he was paid for bringing the Indians, captured about a mile from Tuscarora, to Elko. All such private claims should be carefully scrutinized before being provided for by an Act of the Legislature. If the claim is a valid one it should be paid; but it is not just clear where the $500 worth of service came in.—Independent.

Pigott, who has achieved such notoriety as a liar and scoundrel, through the Parnell inquiry, was at one time proprietor of the Irishman and the Shamrock, newspapers published in Dublin, which were subsequently absorbed by the United Ireland. He wanted to run the Land League after the Fenian fashion, and his failure to acquire a commanding influence in the organization is said to be the origin of his hostility to Parnell.

Early in the session the APPEAL cautioned the members against "fighting other fellows' schemes," and talking too much. Those who did not heed this advice are realizing too late that they lost ground early in the session by occupying the time of the House too much, and now their bills are being mowed down.

The report of Surveyor General Jones is a very exhaustive and carefully prepared document. It contains more statistical facts about Nevada than have ever been published before, and those who have not read it will do well to get a copy and learn something of the great resources of the State they live in.

Party lines were drawn for the first time in the Senate yesterday. In the silver memorial to Congress, a clause occurred censuring the Democratic Administration for its hostility to silver, and the Democrats tried to strike it out, but failed, and the resolution was carried by a strict party vote.
